

Silvia Ardagna

Silvia is a senior economist and Foreign Exchange (FX) strategist in the Global FX and EM Strategy team. She focuses on the FX markets globally and contributes to the research and strategy of FX markets. Silvia's research work covers a variety of issues in macroeconomics, including the effects of fiscal austerity measures on economic activity and interest rates.

Silvia joined Goldman Sachs in 2012 as an executive director in the Global Macro & Markets Fixed Income Research team, previously focusing on the rate markets globally and contributing to the research and strategy of developed rates markets. She was named managing director in 2013.

Prior to joining the firm, Silvia worked at Bank of America Merrill Lynch as senior European economist from 2010 to 2011. Before that, she was an associate professor at the Department of Economics of Harvard University from 2004 to 2010 and an assistant professor at Wellesley College from 2000 to 2004.

Silvia has published in leading academic journals and her work on budget consolidations has been cited in several publications, including the Financial Times, The Wall Street Journal and The New York Times. She has been a consultant for the European Central Bank Fiscal Policy Division and a visiting fellow at the International Monetary Fund Fiscal Affairs Division.

Silvia earned a BA in Economics and an MA in Economics from Universita' Bocconi, Milan, in 1994 and 1995, respectively, and a PhD in Economics from Boston College in 2000.